What I Learned at The ACC

I knew that pursuing Health Care would be a wise career choice, especially for someone who didn't know what she “wanted to be” when she grew up. During the two years in the Health Occupations class I discovered that nursing was something I wanted to pursue.

I vividly remember my times in the LP area nursing homes. It showed me that Nursing and Health Care are more than just blood and guts (although they are that too!) I learned that there is something very valuable to just being kind to someone and helping them through difficult moments in their lives, and it solidified my belief that I should treat patients the way I would like to be treated.

My Advice to The ACC

Whatever sort of work you pursue, try to be a person that your co-workers can count on. Showing up on time, helping others when needed, and being pleasant to those around you are the basics you should strive towards.
